Location of Site

Background Information

- The post box is located on the public footpath outside 398 Illawarra Road, Marrickville and is still in use;
- Local historical significance as a rare early post box which is still in use as a post box, and as the last remaining visual evidence of a postal service that existed at 398 Illawarra Road for over forty years (circa 1890-1936), known as the “Harnleigh Post Office” from 1907.

Modifications

- Any modifications are nominal.

Statement of Significance

- The post box demonstrates adaptation of a British imperial post box design with the incorporation of the symbol of the Waratah (now a NSW State emblem);
- The post box at 398 Illawarra Road is one of the last remaining examples of the old style of post boxes in the Marrickville area and Sydney metropolitan;
- The post box is considered additionally remarkable as it is still used as a post box; and
- The post box is of local aesthetic significance as a rare example of a cast iron post box based on a British design of 1879, with the design modified for Colonial use.

Management Recommendations

- The setting of the post box should be protected;
- All fabric should be retained and conserved; and
- Council should monitor the condition of the post box regularly and maintain the external paint layer to prevent rust.
